

Properties of porous alumina ceramics

Zaw Ye Maw Oo

Mendeleev University of Chemical Technology of Russia, Russia

Porous materials are commonly used as catalyst supports in the processes of oxidation, hydrogenation and dehydrogenation at high temperature, corrosion in feed processing- corrosive environments at endothermic and exothermic reactions. In particular, for this purpose various types of corundum materials with high chemical inertness is needed. Porosity materials due

Notes: