

Novel targets in the peripheral blood mononuclear cells and circulating plasma differentiate poor prognosis breast cancer subtypes

Sirin Adham
Sultan Qaboos University, Oman

Circulating plasma and peripheral blood mononuclear (PBMCs) cells provide an informative snapshot of systemic physiology state. The role of neuropilin-1 (NRP-1) and its interacting molecules was investigated in breast tumor tissue

Notes: